

A new phenomenon is taking hold across the world - "shrinkflation". This is when companies reduce the size of their products or range of services while maintaining prices. It is in reaction to the rising prices of raw materials needed in the production process. Another tactic being used is to place smaller numbers of items in larger boxes, providing an illusion to shoppers that they are getting more for their money. Shrinking the size of products is in effect a cost-cutting strategy. Manufacturers are relying on psychology here. They know that consumers are more sensitive to price than quantity or quality of a product. Most shoppers will still make a regular purchase, even if it has shrunk, as long as the price has not risen.

A chocolate bar company has resorted to shrinking the size of one of its flagship products by 10 per cent to maintain its bottom line. A company spokesperson said: "We look to absorb costs in this difficult environment so we have had to make the decision to slightly reduce the weight of chocolate bars for the first time since 2012, so that we can keep them competitive." The service industry is also being inventive to try to refrain from raising prices. The hotel chains Hilton and Marriott have made daily housekeeping services "opt in". This means that guests must now request the cleaning of their room. Many other free services we have taken for granted are on the wane and being shrunk.

A/ Comprehension Read the text carefully then do the activities (08points)

Nepotism is favouritism granted to relatives or friends, with no regard to merit. Nepotism can happen at home, school, college, politics and even in workplace. Workplace Nepotism is hard to tolerate. Remember at school or college, your class teacher or lecturer who gives preferences to his/ her favourite student. Political Nepotism is also common, where their relations and friends are given importance when it comes to play a powerful role in politics. Similar is the case of Workplace Nepotism or favouritism. Every employee wants to be appreciated for his/her work and performance.

In the workplace, when someone or perhaps a group of people appears to be treated better than others and not necessarily for reasons related to superior work performance it is referred to as nepotism. It can also be seen in cases where the supervisor is favouring a relative at the workplace and providing the particular person with more facilities than the other employees working in the same office. It is a demoralizing factor for an employee who is part of the organization.

Nepotism is a threat to an organization and needs to be dealt consciously before letting it creep into the system. In present times, this subject has become a very sensitive issue causing a lot of stress leading to a drop in level of the employees, dissatisfaction in the company and ultimate decision to move on from the present company.
